More Super Study Tips

Courtesy Princeton Review

■ Get real. When looking at the homework due tomorrow, be realistic about how long things actually take. Gauge how long it will take to read that history chapter and write a response. Have a plan for how to spend the time available.

■ Use class time wisely. Is the lecture finished, but there's still 10 minutes of class left? Get a jump on the homework while the knowledge is still fresh. Or use the time to ask the teacher about concepts that were fuzzy the first time.

■ Review class notes each night. Fill in details, edit the parts that don't make sense and star or highlight the most important bits of information. Interacting with notes helps students remember them.

■ Study a little every day. Cramming Spanish vocabulary for a quiz might work in the short-term, but when it comes time to study for midterms, the crammed knowledge will be lost. Reviewing the terms later will help store them for the long haul.

■ Don't get depressed over a bad grade. A rough start won't necessarily ruin the entire year. Take proactive steps by tracking grades regularly and getting a tutor if needed.

■ Make a friend in every class. Find a few people to contact from each class with homework questions when it's not possible to attend. Be sure and do the same for them! When it comes time to study for exams, this network becomes a study group.
