Letters: To the editor for this week

and their contingent structures would double the tonnage of plastic waste and this type of plastic is not “recyclable.”

Third, bird injury and deaths caused by wind turbines are in the hundreds of thousands, violating federal endangered species laws.

Fourth, demand for the raw materials needed for wind and solar power-generating systems will increase 1,200 percent by 2050 just to meet the minimum “Green New Deal” goals. Demands for these materials could not be met from the massive mining required in developed countries and would certainly result in a “new gold rush” into remote pristine, fragile biodiverse areas of the world.

Let’s rethink this!

Enough?

Editor:
When is enough, enough? That is a question I must answer.

Since I moved to Alameda in 1957, I have been involved in almost any cause that pitted “the people” against anything big: business, government, landlords and for anything to protect the rights of “the little guy” or minority.

I wrote a letter recently (“Cut me in on that deal,” Aug. 1) questioning the construction of multi-story apartments at South Shore. Originally, plans to build anything over one story were not allowed due to the questions of earthquake safety. And a school was closed due to safety.

The other night I got a call from a woman who asked me if I wanted to be part of a group opposed to the apartment buildings. She was very well informed and articulate. I didn’t say “yes” but I told her to let me know when and if there was to be a meeting.

It is clear to me that the closing of Lum Elementary School was just the first step in clearing the way for the construction of more apartments.

I write about this and begin to boil. I am totally angry. But I am 88 years old and at some point I am going to have to say, “I’m sorry, I can’t.” Is this that point?

— Ashley Jones
Editor’s note: We hope it’s never enough, Ash. Never stop speaking out for what you think is important. If nothing else, then to inspire younger generations of Alamedans to do the same.

Truth behind our ‘Climate Catastrophe’

Editor:
Thank you to Hunter Cobb for his timely commentary on climate change (“Questioning the Truth behind ‘Climate Catastrophe,’” Sept. 26). This is good timing as the United Nations (UN) just had a climate summit where the UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres stated, “You understand that [the] climate emergency is the fight of our lives, and for our lives.”

And good timing as there was a recent release of a sobering UN report on oceans where it is concluded that the ocean ecosystems are being pushed to the limits by rising greenhouse gases and sea levels will rise which will imperil many coastal communities, including Alameda, as reported in the New York Times.

In the interest of truth, as Cobb appears to be dedicated to, let’s look at what his commentary claims: that over the next decades, we need to triple our use of fossil fuels to keep growing populations healthy. According to the World Health Organization, climate change is expected to cause approximately 250,000 additional deaths per year, from malnutrition, malaria, diarrhea and heat stress between 2030 and 2050.

The fuel source the commentary recommends: burning of fossil fuels, is already causing 7 million deaths each year, about one in eight worldwide. It also causes respiratory and cardiovascular disease, and premature mortality as reported on www.foreignaffairs.com.

Next, the commentary asserts that “there are thousands of expert scientists who disagree with the alarmists ... they have been heavily intimidated and their research suppressed.” I’d like to see some evidence to support this assertion. Some 97 percent of published climate scientists agree that humans are causing climate change. And, the greater the climate expertise among those surveyed, the higher the consensus on human-caused global warming. For reference, see <https://iopscience.iop.org>.

In my opinion, the writer is woefully uninformed and conveniently forgets to mention that many of the climate-denial scientists are funded to do their work by organizations such as the Heartland Institute and Americans for Prosperity, which take large contributions from the fossil fuel industry as you can find reported on www.beforereflood.com.

— Frances Montell

Instead of criticizing Alameda youth and Greta Thunberg as a “media-created show-piece,” I applaud our youth taking part in climate-action strikes. They are standing up for their future as the generations before them have done nothing to address this current crisis.

— Paul English

Spoken like a dinosaur

Editor:
I feel that Hunter Cobb is fortunate because he will probably die of old age before he is forced to acknowledge how tragically misguided his nonsensical ideas about climate change really are (“Questioning the Truth behind ‘Climate Catastrophe,’” Sept. 26).

Fortunately for the rest of us, students are not passively “being organized” but are organizing themselves into an astonishingly effective political force. High school students today seem to have greater knowledge and understanding of science than previous generations of even Ivy League college graduates.

Unlike people who share Cobb’s opinion, young people understand the difference between renewable energy sources and fossil fuels, and the potential and possibilities for new technologies to make this world a better place.

Now if only the old dinosaurs who still roam the Earth would get out of their way and let them get to work.
