Stop Playing Candyland! Board Game Night on Tap at Library

Staff Reporter
 Are kids' old board games getting too repetitive? Come join the Alameda Board Gamers as they try out board games that children and adults will want to play again and again. Playing board games with kids is a fun way to get them learning and can build sportsmanship and patience. But that doesn't mean parents should have to play boring games. There is a wide world of great kids' games available. The board gamers will introduce families to several different games for kids of all ages, and then demonstrate and teach the games. Lists of all the games and local places to purchase the games will be available. So, join a fun afternoon of games and learning, and never visit any lands of candy again! This adult board game event will be held on Saturday, July 9, starting at 2 p.m. in the Main Library, 1550 Oak St. Questions about this event? Call the Reference Desk at 747-7713 or email Hallie Fields at hfields@alamedaca.gov for more information.
