Local Kids Get a Taste of Holiday History

When the school year ended in May, it was the end of a chapter for Jonathan, a ten-year-old second grader, who took a field trip to the San Francisco Zoo to see the famous Chimpanzee Treehouse. Jonathan was delighted to see the treehouse, and he recalls enjoying the day, but he also remembers the cold temperatures and the lack of shade, which made the trip less enjoyable.

Jonathan was also excited to learn about different cultures and their culinary gifts to the world. He visited a stall selling traditional dishes from countries across the globe and tried a variety of foods that he had never tasted before.

The educational trip was a great opportunity for Jonathan to learn about different cultures and their traditions. He came away with a better understanding of the world and a love for learning about new things. He is looking forward to attending more field trips in the future and exploring new cultures and ideas.

LIVE: Family services for Wayne Dutchover

Wayne Dutchover, a beloved father and husband, passed away unexpectedly before he could see the birth of his new granddaughter. He was preceded in death by his father, Leonard Dutchover; his mother, Ida Dutchover; and his sister, Janet B. Dutchover. He is survived by his wife, Jill Dutchover; his children, Walter Dutchover, Wayne Dutchover (Jill), and Walter Dutchover (Kelly); step-siblings; his stepchildren, Walter, and the grandchildren.

Wayne was born and raised in Alameda, California, and attended local schools. He graduated from Alameda High School and went on to study at the University of California, Berkeley, where he earned a degree in business administration. After graduation, he worked for several years in the finance industry before starting his own business.

Wayne was a devoted husband and father, and he loved spending time with his family. He enjoyed playing sports, especially baseball and golf, and he was a dedicated fan of the Oakland Athletics. He also loved spending time in the kitchen, experimenting with new recipes and cooking for his family.

Wayne was a kind and generous man who always put others before himself. He was deeply loved by all who knew him, and he will be missed greatly by his family and friends.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Alameda Boys & Girls Club, 330 Central Ave., Alameda, CA 94501, or to the Alameda County Cancer Foundation, 555 Corporate Center Drive, Alameda, CA 94501.
